21st Century Cures Act: Overview and Implications for Providers, Patients and Risk Managers

The 21st Century Cures Act (Cures Act) is designed to foster a greater sense of transparency about each patient's care journey, providing patients with the tools to more easily access and understand their health information. It will also encourage interoperability between the technologies used to gather, store, and access patient information. Managing Risks Related to Diagnostic Decision Making

Click here to read biography

Ann D. Gaffey, RN, MSN, CPHRM, DFASHRM
President
Healthcare Risk and Safety Strategies, LLC

The diagnostic decision-making process is complex, involving multiple systems, processes, members of the health care team and patients to ensure diagnoses are made in a timely and accurate manner. When there is a "human" or "system" failure in this process, patients are at risk of harm or death. This presentation will address the concept of "diagnostic error," provide an overview of the problem from a harm and professional liability perspective, address risk mitigation strategies, and present national work underway to improve data collection efforts to better understand this important problem in health care.
